

1 ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE.

2 A head and neck garment comprises a head covering (or hood) member,
3 a neck member including a body having two ends, a zipper attached 4 to the body near the ends, thereby forming two flaps which are 5 positioned beneath the zipper. The zipper is not as long as the 6 ends, and the remainder of the ends are stitched together. The 7 zipper is attached to the neck member body at an angle that is 8 about 45 degrees, such that when the zipper is moved into a closed 9 position, the garment enables the wearer to warm their neck, and 10 when the wearer wants to cool down, the zipper is moved into an 11 open position, the ends are separated and remain open, exposing an 12 area of the wearer and enabling the exposed area to be cooled down 13 without interference from the garment. The garment is particularly 14 suited for outdoor activities such as skiing.
